If I die in Morocco

Still I'm half home.

Laurie'll know what I mean

Nobody teaches you how the East and the West come together

In the raging coast here where Daring young brave young, inconsistent young men jump down into in summer, how people living Here ...

though some are escapees....

Most are at the end of the old

Times at the end like California now

People proud here of living mixtures where people tolerate monarchy and live inside inconsistencies that make me want to forgive everybody.
